Felons Plead Guilty to Voting Illegally in 2008 Election

The Associated Press reports two felons admitted to voting illegally in Wisconsin in the 2008 presidential election:

David Lewis and Ramon Martinez pleaded guilty to one count of voting by a disqualified person. Prosecutors agreed to drop a charge of providing false information to election officials against Lewis as part of a plea bargain.

They each face up to 42 months in prison and $10,000 in fines.

Prosecutors say both Lewis and Martinez were on probation for felony convictions in Milwaukee County when they voted on Nov. 4, 2008. Lewis had a 2004 conviction on felony child support charges and Martinez had been convicted of felony theft in September 2008.

These guilty pleas come after last week's conviction in Wisconsin of a former election official for voter fraud.
